INDIANA'S PRESERVATION PARTNERS

As Indiana's State Historic Preservation Office, the DNR Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology (DHPA) initiates partnerships with a wide variety of preservation and archaeology groups for purposes of preserving Hoosier heritage. These groups include national, state, and local level governmental agencies, not-for-profit organizations, educational institutions, grassroots preservation societies, and avocational groups. The DHPA realizes the importance of forming and maintaining these partnerships for a number of reasons. The DHPA has limited resources and therefore benefits from the cooperation and leadership of local-level agencies and organizations in addressing preservation issues. Many of these partners already have effective programs in place for preservation planning, education, and action that reach a very broad constituency throughout the state. Finally, sharing the responsibility for preserving our cultural resources provides a sense of ownership and stewardship to many different people at many different levels. The preservation of our Hoosier heritage requires the continual efforts of many partners working together to pass on to future generations the tangible reminders of our state's rich history.

The following reference list is by no means all-inclusive, but it contains the more active partners. Partners are listed at the national, state, regional, and local levels; addresses, phone and fax numbers, and email or website addresses are given when appropriate.

The National Park Service (NPS), part of the U.S. Department of the Interior, is Indiana's main partner for the preservation of cultural resources. Each year, NPS provides financial assistance to the DHPA through its Historic Preservation Fund (HPF) Program for the administration of preservation and archaeology programs in Indiana. The majority of this money is redistributed as HPF subgrants to municipal governments, educational institutions, and not-for-profit organizations throughout the state. The DHPA works very closely with NPS Staff on such issues as the Underground Railroad Initiative and the National Historic Landmarks program. The National Park Service maintains three properties in Indiana – the George Rogers Clark National Historical Park in Vincennes, the Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore in Porter, and the Lincoln Boyhood National Memorial in Lincoln City. The NPS also provides Indiana with a variety of preservation literature that the DHPA distributes to the public.

Founded in 1949, the National Trust for Historic Preservation (NTHP) has as its mission “to foster an appreciation of the diverse character and meaning of our American cultural heritage and to preserve and revitalize the livability of our communities by leading the nation in saving America’s historic environments.” To this end, the National Trust carries out a number of major public education programs, including the operation of 18 museum properties nationwide. Historic Preservation, the National Trust’s award-winning magazine, features the history and architecture of significant places all across America. Special workshops teach educators how to use historic places in their own communities to make history come alive for schoolchildren. National Preservation Week focuses on a different theme each year in order to help communities promote preservation and highlight various aspects of their local heritage. The Trust’s National Main Street Center is one of the most successful community economic development programs in the country and helps to revitalize the economies of downtowns while preserving the fabric of these commercial districts. The National Trust also provides technical, financial, and legal assistance, as well as publicity for communities facing imminent threats to their historic character and resources.

Other Federal Agencies

The DHPA interacts with many federal agencies that own historic properties and archaeological sites, or that provide licenses, permits, or funding for projects involving cultural resources. The Section 106 review process requires that Division staff review and comment on these federal projects. Therefore, the DHPA can utilize this interaction as an opportunity to educate the various federal agencies on sensitivity to cultural resources.

One of the most widely recognized tools to encourage rural preservation is the Hoosier Homestead Award Program administered by the Office of the Commissioner of Agriculture. This program recognizes farms that have been continuously owned and operated by the same family for over 100 years. The program stresses the important contributions these family farms have made to the economic, cultural, and social advancement of Indiana. Honorees receive an enameled plaque to display outside the homestead.

Council for the Conservation of Indiana Archaeology

The Council for the Conservation of Indiana Archaeology (CCIA) is a statewide organization of professional archaeologists. The main purpose of the CCIA is to strengthen the professional identification of archaeology as well as the recognition of qualified professional archaeologists. The CCIA encourages high standards in the training of archaeologists and also requires high standards of performance from practicing professional archaeologists. In addition, the CCIA helps to identify properly qualified archaeologists for agencies and organizations that use archaeological professionals in the course of their activities. It also communicates to the public the importance of the proper practice of archaeology and supports the standards of responsible archaeology in Indiana. For current contact information, please call the DHPA.

Historic Landmarks Foundation of Indiana (HLFI) is the largest statewide not-for-profit preservation organization in the country. HLFI works with individuals, businesses, nonprofit groups, and governmental agencies across Indiana to save, protect, and restore historic buildings. Special emphasis is placed on fostering preservation at the local level, particularly by nurturing local, grassroots organizations. Technical and financial assistance is available to local not-for-profit preservation organizations through HLFI's grant programs and Statewide Revolving Loan Fund. HLFI is the DHPA's major partner in the historic sites and structures survey program. Public education efforts include programs, workshops, and publications to educate Hoosiers about preservation and the ways that local landmarks enhance the identity, unique visual qualities, and economies of neighborhoods, cities, towns, and rural areas. HLFI also serves in a preservation advocacy capacity by working on preservation issues with local units of government and preservation commissions, state agencies and legislators, and national-level preservation organizations. The organization's offices in South Bend, Cambridge City, Aurora, Jeffersonville, Evansville, Terre Haute, Gary, and Indianapolis bring HLFI's services closer to communities throughout the state.

Indiana Alliance of Historic District Commissions

The Indiana Alliance of Historic District Commissions (IAHDC) is a statewide organization that is designed to support and assist the state's historic preservation commissions, review boards, and Certified Local Government programs. The IAHDC provides resources and training for about 30 member entities in order to inform and educate the citizens, staff, and government officials who serve on review boards, thereby enabling these bodies to make better decisions about historic resources in their communities. For current IAHDC contact information, please call the DHPA.

The Indiana Arts Commission (IAC) operates several assistance programs to benefit local arts organizations. A major goal of the IAC is to secure a significant role for the arts in local economic development, education, and cultural tourism. This goal provides an opportunity for the IAC to interface with the DHPA and the Indiana Main Street Program through strategies that encourage the reuse and redevelopment of historic urban centers, particularly the rehabilitation of historic buildings for use by local arts organizations.

The Indiana Department of Commerce (IDOC) is a critical partner in the redevelopment of historic urban areas. There are three divisions within the IDOC that deal with historic preservation: the Indiana Main Street Program, the Community Development Division, and the Indiana Division of Tourism. The DHPA supports IDOC's programs by way of technical assistance, HPF subgrants to local organizations, and administration of National Register and survey programs.

The Indiana Main Street Program uses the four-point approach of economic restructuring, organization of partners, promotion of heritage and commercial opportunities, and improving streetscape design to promote the comprehensive revitalization of downtowns and commercial districts. Indiana has more than 160 Main Street communities, including 16 that have full-time Main Street managers. All of these communities have demonstrated a strong commitment to the revitalization of Indiana's city and town centers and historic commercial districts. The results of Main Street initiatives since 1988 include hundreds of facade restorations, over 1,000 building rehabilitations, and the creation of thousands of new jobs in historic urban centers. These organizations can be powerful forces for local preservation by rehabilitating vacant or underutilized historic commercial buildings and giving them new life and utility.

The Community Development Division administers several large federal grant programs and has six regional offices throughout the state. Programs include: the Community Focus Fund, Planning Grants, the Community Planning Fund, Community Development Action Grants, the Neighborhood Assistance Program, and the Industrial Recovery Site/Dinosaur Building Tax Credit. All of these programs impact the built environment and offer opportunities for quality planning and adaptive reuse of historic resources.

The Indiana Division of Tourism promotes cultural and heritage tourism, which is one of the fastest growing sectors of the service industry. The cultural tourist seeks authentic and culturally specific experiences. Therefore, this kind of tourism helps finance the preservation of unique cultural landscapes and resources, often providing the economic viability needed to sustain them.

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is comprised of twenty-two divisions that oversee the conservation and protection of Indiana's natural and cultural resources. The DNR's Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology has almost daily interaction with land-holding sister divisions that require assistance in dealing with their prehistoric and historic resources, and shares responsibility for state-funded grant programs with several other divisions. This relationship provides opportunities to promote the DHPA's programs through other DNR offices and facilities.

Between 1993 and 2000, the Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT) allocated approximately twenty million dollars of grant funding to historic transportation facilities and archaeological research projects through the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act known as ISTEA, and its successor program, the Transportation Enhancement Act for the 21st Century known as TEA21. This figure represents roughly one third of all transportation enhancement grant projects in Indiana. The DHPA has been active in the development and promotion of the TEA program and the evaluation of TEA preservation project proposals.

The Indiana Historical Bureau (IHB) is the state agency responsible for public education programs relating to Indiana history. This agency administers the prominent Indiana Historical Marker Program, which places commemorative markers on the locations of significant historical events and sites. In addition, the IHB publishes The Indiana History Bulletin, The Indiana Historian, and The Junior Indiana Historian. These publications reach a wide audience throughout the state, including school-aged children. The DHPA has partnered with the IHB to produce several issues of The Indiana Historian devoted to archaeology.

This facility is one of the main historical research facilities in the state of Indiana. The IHS publishes books that deal with Indiana history, prehistory, and genealogy as well as four periodicals: Traces of Indiana and Midwestern History, Indiana Magazine of History, The Hoosier Genealogist, and Black History News & Notes. The IHS frequently sponsors a grant and fellowship program to promote scholarship in Indiana history. The Indiana Junior Historical Society, which encourages the study of history by school-age children, is also administered by the IHS. Division staff members regularly use IHS services for National Register and archaeological research.

The Indiana Housing Finance Authority (IHFA) is a critical partner in redeveloping and preserving historic residential areas throughout the state. IHFA also works closely with the Indiana Main Street Program in the adaptive reuse of downtowns. A mix of commercial and housing space was a historic component of downtown areas, and it is key to their survival today. IHFA administers federal grant programs and the State Housing Trust Fund, which help to preserve and revitalize downtown areas and historic neighborhoods. The agency also encourages development of affordable housing through the federal Rental Housing Tax Credit program. These financial incentives can often be combined with the DHPA's grant and tax credit programs.

The Indiana Humanities Council (IHC) co-sponsors the Historic Preservation Education Grants with Historic Landmarks Foundation of Indiana. These grants provide up to $2,000 for conferences, printed materials, or other preservation education initiatives. IHC's Humanities Initiative Grant Program has assisted with the growing demand for Indiana Archaeology Week materials. The Division and the IHC continue to develop mutually beneficial educational programming.

The library's holdings include information on archaeological resources, historic structures, cemeteries, and Indiana history.

LOCAL LEVEL PARTNERS

Avocational Archaeology Organizations

Indiana has several avocational archaeological organizations that advocate the wise collecting of artifacts, the proper recording of sites, and the study of prehistoric and historic archaeology in the state. The more active groups include: the Upper White River Archaeological Society, the White River Valley Archaeological Association, the Little Turtle Archaeological Research Society, the Northwest Indiana Archaeological Association, the Southern Indiana Archaeological Society, the Whitewater Valley Archaeological Society, the Indian Creek Archaeological Society, and the Indiana Archaeological Society. By fostering active relationships with these types of organizations, the DHPA promotes the benefits that can be derived from appropriate archaeological investigations, and provides people with opportunities to make direct contributions to research about Indiana's heritage.

Local Preservation Commissions

Indiana has more than thirty communities with local preservation ordinances and active preservation commissions consisting of professional and citizen members. The duties of these commissions include surveying and mapping historic properties within their jurisdictions, establishing design guidelines for historic districts, and reviewing certificates of approval for alterations and demolitions. These commissions strive to safeguard the historic character and resources that make their communities unique.

Local Preservation Organizations and Historical Societies

Most Indiana counties have at least one local preservation organization or historical society for a total of about 115 groups statewide with thousands of members. Some organizations focus on one individual resource such as a historic home, or a class of resources such as covered bridges, while other organizations focus on local history and genealogy, or historic resources throughout the city or county. Together, these organizations serve as grassroots advocates for the preservation of cultural resources throughout Indiana, and can be effective vehicles for influencing local level planning and policy relating to cultural and historic resources.

Main Street Communities

Over 160 communities in Indiana participate in the Indiana Main Street program, which is more than in any other state. These local organizations are vehicles for local economic development and preservation efforts, and a number of them have participated in the DHPA's grants programs. These communities understand that economic revitalization and preservation success is measured by incremental changes in their downtown areas. (For more information, refer to the Indiana Department of Commerce above.)

Universities with Related Programs (Archaeology / Anthropology / Public History / Preservation)

Archaeology and anthropology programs at a number of Indiana universities are active partners in the effort to educate the public about the importance of archaeological resources in the state. These institutions include: Ball State University, Indiana University, Indiana State University, Martin University, Purdue University, the University of Indianapolis, and the University of Notre Dame. Many of these universities also have active cultural resource management programs that allow professionals and students to participate in Section 106-mandated archaeological investigations, as well as archaeological research and grant projects. Educators from many of these institutions have been awarded DHPA-administered grants to conduct archaeological investigations, have assisted the DHPA with the investigation of "accidental discoveries" of archaeological and human burial sites, and have actively supported Indiana Archaeology Month activities.

Three universities are active partners in the effort to educate the public about preservation and architectural resources in Indiana. Ball State University offers a graduate degree in historic preservation. Course projects are designed to focus on real-world preservation problems, and to benefit actual property owners, community organizations, and local government agencies whenever possible. Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis (IUPUI) offers a graduate degree in public history to prepare historians for non-academic careers in preservation, corporate history, cultural resource management, historical societies, and museums. Many students in these two programs augment their classroom experiences by working for a variety of historical and preservation organizations during required internships. Indiana University at Bloomington has a Folklife Department that is yielding some of the premier scholarship on Indiana's vernacular architecture.

Miscellaneous Preservation and Archaeology Partners

Other entities, organizations, and agencies at all levels that have been recognized as potential partners for preservation include: local chambers of commerce, the Indiana Association of Cities and Towns, the Indiana Association of Counties, the Indiana Department of Education, and a wide variety of special interest groups that relate to historic resources, such as railroad enthusiast groups and Habitat for Humanity. Many other professionals in related fields can be powerful allies for proactively protecting our cultural resources. This list includes, but is not limited to: architects, designers, landscape architects, engineers, town and city planners, developers, and people dealing with real estate. The DHPA staff will continue to identify potential partners, engage these groups and individuals, and develop relationships with them.

Federal Funding Programs for Watershed Protection

The Abandoned Mine Land Reclamation (AMLR) Program is designed to protect the public and correct environmental damage caused by coal and, to a limited extent, noncoal mining practices that occurred prior to August 3, 1977. AMLR provides for the restoration of eligible lands and waters mined and abandoned or left inadequately restored. AMLR is divided into two programs, the State Indian Reclamation Program and the Federal Reclamation Program. Both programs address problems such as dangerous highwalls, slides, subsidence, dangerous portals, and polluted water.

Brownfield Assessment Demonstration Pilots - EPA's brownfield program helps communities clean up and redevelop properties. EPA defines a brownfield site as "real property, the expansion, redevelopment, or reuse of which may be contaminated by the presence or potential presence of a hazardous substance, pollutant, or contaminant." The program helps mitigate potential health risks and assists in restoring economic vitality to areas where brownfields exist. EPA's Assessment Grants are directed toward environmental activities preliminary to cleanup, such as site assessment, identification, characterization, and site response or cleanup planning.

Conservation Reserve Program is a voluntary program that offers long-term rental payments and cost-share assistance to establish long-term, resource-conserving cover on environmentally sensitive cropland or, in some cases, marginal pastureland. The protective cover reduces soil erosion, improves water quality, and enhances or establishes wildlife habitat.

The Conservation Security Program (CSP) will provide incentive payments to producers who adopt and/or maintain conservation practices on private working lands. For more details see the Farm Bill web site (click on the program name and refer to the link listed under "primary Internet"). www.usda.gov/farmbill/

The Emergency Conservation Program (ECP) provides financial assistance to farmers and ranchers for the rehabilitation of farmlands damaged by floods, hurricanes, or other natural disasters. ECP also provides funds for carrying out emergency water conservation measures during periods of severe drought. ECP assistance is available for removing debris and restoring permanent fences, terraces, diversions, irrigation systems, and other conservation installations. Contact local or state Farm Service Agency office. Search on the Web at: <http://www.fsa.usda.gov/edso/statedefault.htm>

The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service's Emergency Watershed Protection (EWP) program helps protect lives and property threatened by natural disasters such as floods, hurricanes, tornadoes, droughts, and wildfires. EWP provides funding for such work as clearing debris from clogged waterways, restoring vegetation, and stabilizing river banks. The measures that are taken must be environmentally and economically sound and generally benefit more than one property owner. EWP also provides fund to purchase floodplain easements as an emergency measure. Floodplain easements restore, protect, maintain, and enhance the functions of the floodplain; conserve natural values including fish and wildlife habitat, water quality, flood water retention, ground water recharge, and open space; reduce long-term federal disaster assistance; and safeguard lives and property from floods, drought, and the products of erosion. The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service's Farmland Protection Program (FPP) is a voluntary program that helps farmers and ranchers keep their land in agriculture and prevents conversion of agricultural land to non-agricultural uses. The program provides matching funds to organizations with existing farmland protection programs that enable them to purchase conservation easements. These entities purchase easements from landowners in exchange for a lump sum payment, not to exceed the appraised fair market value of the land's development rights. The easements are for perpetuity unless prohibited by state law. Eligible land is land on a farm or ranch that has prime, unique, statewide, or locally important soil or contains historical or archaeological resources; is subject to a pending offer by an eligible entity; and includes cropland, rangeland, grassland, pasture land, and incidental forest land and wetlands that are part of an agricultural operation.

The 2002 Farm Bill established the Grassland Reserve Program (GRP) for the purpose of restoring and conserving two million acres of grassland, rangeland, and pastureland. GRP will do this through the use of up to 30-year rental agreements and 30-year or permanent easements. Rental and easement payments are based on a percentage of the fair market value of the land, less the grazing value of the land for the period during the contract or easement period. GRP lands may be used for haying and grazing under a conservation plan. Total funding through 2007 is authorized at $254 million in easements, rental agreements, and cost-share payments for enrolling up to 2 million acres. This program is under development. Contact for FPP and GRP, your local USDA Service Center, listed in the telephone book under U.S. Department of Agriculture and found at www.usda.gov/offices.html (click on County Office Locator)

The Forest Service's Forest Land Enhancement Program (FLEP) replaces the Forestry Incentives Program and Steward Incentives Program. The program provides financial, technical, educational, and related assistance to State Foresters or equivalent agencies to assist private landowners in sustainable forest management to enhance production of timber, fish and wildlife habitat, soil and water quality, wetland, recreational resources, and aesthetic values. FLEP projects may include implementation of practices to protect and restore forest lands, increase carbon sequestration, control invasive species, and preserve aesthetic quality. Projects may also include reforestation, afforestation, and agroforestry practices.

Through its Forest Legacy Program (FLP), the USDA Forest Service supports state efforts to protect environmentally sensitive forest lands. Designed to encourage the protection of privately owned forest lands, FLP is an entirely voluntary program. The program helps fund the acquisition of forest land or partial interests in privately owned forest lands. It encourages and supports the acquisition of conservation easements, legally binding agreements transferring a negotiated set of property rights from one party to another, without removing the property from private ownership or the local tax rolls. FLP conservation easements restrict development, require sustainable forestry practices, protect a range of public values and many require public access for recreation. The National Fish and Wildlife Foundation operates a conservation grants program that awards challenge grants, on a competitive basis, to eligible grant recipients. Grants are awarded to projects that: (1) address priority actions promoting fish and wildlife conservation and the habitats on which they depend; (2) work proactively to involve other conservation and community interests; (3) leverage available funding; and (4) evaluate project outcomes.

The National Fish and Wildlife Foundation is working to expand and strengthen its partnership with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) to support innovative and effective conservation and stewardship of our country's private lands. The goal of the partnership is to support high quality projects that engage private landowners, primarily farmers and ranchers, in the conservation and enhancement of wildlife and natural resources on their lands. Successful projects will address conservation practices in ongoing agriculture, ranching, and forestry operations (at the watershed or landscape scale); offer value for fish and wildlife; include partnerships; and have a strong "on-the-ground" component.

Through its 319 program, EPA provides formula grants to the states and tribes to implement nonpoint source projects and programs in accordance with section 319 of the Clean Water Act (CWA). Nonpoint source pollution reduction projects can be used to protect source water areas and the general quality of water resources in a watershed. Examples of previously funded projects include installation of best management practices (BMPs) for animal waste; design and implementation of BMP systems for stream, lake, and estuary watersheds; basinwide landowner education programs; and lake projects previously funded under the CWA section 314 Clean Lakes Program.

The EPA's Wetland Program Development Grants are intended to encourage comprehensive wetlands program development by promoting the coordination and acceleration of research, investigations, experiments, training, demonstrations, surveys, and studies relating to the causes, effects, extent, prevention, reduction, and elimination of water pollution. Projects build the capacity of states, tribes, and local governments to effectively protect wetland and riparian resources. Projects funded under this program support the initial development of a wetlands protection, restoration or management program or support enhancement/refinement of an existing program.

Wetland Reserve Program Through this voluntary program, the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) provides landowners with financial incentives to restore and protect wetlands in exchange for retiring marginal agricultural land. To participate in the program landowners may sell a conservation easement or enter into a cost-share restoration agreement (landowners voluntarily limit future use of the land, but retain private ownership). Landowners and the NRCS jointly develop a plan for the restoration and maintenance of the wetland.

The Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program (WHIP) is a voluntary program for people who want to develop and improve wildlife habitat on private lands. It provides both technical assistance and cost sharing to help establish and improve fish and wildlife habitat. Participants work with USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service to prepare a wildlife habitat development plan in consultation with a local conservation district. The plan describes the landowner's goals for improving wildlife habitat, includes a list of practices and a schedule for installing them, and details the steps necessary to maintain the habitat for the life of the agreement.

MATCHING GRANT PROGRAMS

The DHPA currently has one federal and two state-funded grant programs. Each program has its own focus, eligibility requirements, funding levels, and time frame as described below. All grant proposals are evaluated by a selection committee and are scored against predetermined evaluation criteria. Due to the great demand for grant assistance for preservation projects, all grant programs are highly competitive. Because of the funding sources, certain aspects of each program are subject to periodic change, including: the occurrence of each program, the total amount of funding available for each program, the time frame of each program, and the maximum grant award levels. All grant programs provide matching grant assistance, where the grant recipient must supply a certain percentage of the total project cost, known as the local match. In addition, all grant funds are paid out on a reimbursement basis. The grant recipient must use their local matching funds to initiate the project, and then must submit documentation of expenses incurred and paid in order to receive the grant funds. Grant awards in each program are subject to maximum award amounts; any part of the total project cost above these

Each year, the DHPA receives funding under the Historic Preservation Fund (HPF) Program, which is administered by the U.S. Department of the Interior, National Park Service. The HPF Program helps to promote historic preservation and archaeology in Indiana by providing assistance to projects that will aid the State in meeting its goals for cultural resource management. Of Indiana's annual HPF allotment, about 85% is set aside to fund a matching grants program and cooperative agreements to foster important preservation and archaeology activities.

Under the HPF matching grants program, grant awards are made in three project categories. Architectural and Historical, Archaeological, and Acquisition and Development When applying for grant funds, applicants must be certain to request and complete the appropriate application packet for their project category.

(statewide)	Educational institutions
	Not-for-profit organizations with 501(c)(3) status
Project categories:	Rehabilitation, Archaeology

In 1998 the Indiana General Assembly made a one-time appropriation of funding for the new Hometown Indiana matching grants program that was designed to assist communities with projects in parkland acquisition and development, urban forestry, and historic preservation and archaeology. By statute, appropriated Hometown funds are divided according to the following ratios: 70% for park projects, 10% for forestry projects, and 20% for preservation projects. DNR's Division of Outdoor Recreation administers the parkland component of the program, while the Division of Forestry administers the urban forestry component.

The intention of the preservation component of Hometown Indiana is to save significant historic and cultural resources that are seriously threatened or endangered. Depending on the State financial resources available, this program operates on a biannual basis.

The administrative requirements and guidelines of Hometown Indiana's preservation component are based on those of the HPF Program for the Archaeological and Acquisition and Development categories. The only differences are the time frame for the completion of projects, the maximum grant award level, and the requirement that a subject property must be, at a minimum, listed in the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures. Note that properties listed in the National Register are automatically included in the State Register.

Under the preservation component of the Hometown Indiana matching grants program, grant awards are made in two project categories Rehabilitation and Archaeology. One application packet covers both project categories.

WABASH RIVER HERITAGE CORRIDOR FUND

Type of funds:	State
Program occurrence:	Variable, pending state appropriation
Total funds available:	Variable
Maximum grant award:	$250,000
Matching share ratio:	80% state / 20% local for all projects
Length of program:	22 months
Eligible applicants:	Municipal government entities
(within the Corridor)	Not-for-profit organizations with 501(c)(3) status

Project categories: Stabilization, Rehabilitation, Acquisition, Archaeological Investigation, Educational/Interpretive Exhibits, Facilities

The Wabash River Heritage Corridor Fund is a periodic program intended to protect and enhance the natural, recreational, and cultural resources located along the Wabash River. The corridor is defined as “the strip of land in Indiana abutting the Wabash River, the Little River, and the portage between the Little and the Maumee Rivers.” This corridor includes the following counties: Adams, Allen, Carroll, Cass, Fountain, Gibson, Huntington, Jay, Knox, Miami, Parke, Posey, Sullivan, Tippecanoe, Vermillion, Vigo, Wabash, Warren, and Wells.

When funding is appropriated by the General Assembly for this program, the Wabash River Heritage Corridor Commission determines the percentages to be distributed for projects in two categories: “natural and recreational,” and “historical and cultural.” The DHPA administers the historical and cultural component, while the natural and recreational component is administered by the DNR Division of Outdoor Recreation.

The administrative requirements and guidelines of this program are similar to those of the Hometown Indiana Program for the Archaeology and Rehabilitation categories. The differences are the time frame for the completion of projects, the maximum grant award level, the matching ratios, and the requirement that a subject property must be, at a minimum, determined eligible for listing in the Indiana Register of Historic Sites and Structures. All properties assisted with Wabash funds must possess both a close geographic proximity to the river and a clear contextual connection to the river and the historical development of the Corridor.

Under the historical and cultural component, grant awards are made in three project categories Stabilization, Rehabilitation, Acquisition, Archaeological Investigation, and Educational / Interpretive Exhibits and Facilities. One application packet covers all three project categories.

OTHER GRANT PROGRAMS

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION. A provision of the Inter-modal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (ISTEA) requires states to set aside ten percent of their share of Surface Transportation Program (STP) funds for projects that enhance the existing transportation system. Each state has the flexibility to create a program to best suit its respective needs within the limits of the law. This program was continued and somewhat expanded under the most current highway bill, TEA-21 (Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century).

Indiana's Transportation Enhancement program allows funding for transportation projects to expand beyond the traditional accommodations for cars, trucks, buses and transit. In addition, provisions for standalone projects will allow transportation opportunities to a broader range of users.

The Indiana Department of Transportation manages the program. Enhancement projects will be identified and developed through a cooperative effort with local agencies, other Indiana state agencies, and Metropolitan Planning Organizations. The following list contains the qualified activities that are eligible for funding under the Indiana Transportation Enhancement (TE) Program.

1. Provision of facilities for pedestrians and bicycles
2. Acquisition of scenic easements and scenic or historic sites
3. Scenic or historic highway programs (including tourist/ welcome center facilities)
4. Landscaping and other scenic beautification
5. Historic preservation
6. Rehabilitation and operation of historic transportation buildings, structures or facilities (including historic railroad facilities and canals)
7. Preservation of abandoned railway corridors (including the conversion and use thereof for pedestrian or bike trails)
8. Control and removal of outdoor advertising
9. Archaeological planning and research
10. Environmental mitigation to address water pollution due to highway runoff or reduce vehicle-caused wildlife mortality while maintaining habitat connectivity
11. Provision of safety and educational activities for pedestrians and bicyclists
12. Establishment of Transportation Museums

Transportation enhancements (TE) are transportation-related activities that are designed to strengthen the cultural, aesthetic, and environmental aspects of the Nation's inter-modal transportation system. The transportation enhancements program provides for the implementation of a variety of non-traditional projects, with examples ranging from the restoration of historic transportation facilities, to bike and pedestrian facilities, to landscaping and scenic beautification, and to the mitigation of water pollution from highway runoff.

Transportation enhancement funding is a cost reimbursement program and not a grant. At least 20 percent of a project's cost must be paid for by the sponsor to show commitment by the local group or community. The applicant may receive reimbursement for eligible costs as the work is completed.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

The Community Focus Fund is a grant program administered by the Indiana Department of Commerce and funded with federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) dollars. These grants support a variety of construction projects that either benefit low to moderate income persons or eliminate blight in communities.

Eligible applicants include:

- Small cities which do not receive a CDBG entitlement directly from U.S. Housing and Urban Development;
- Incorporated towns;
- Counties (excluding Lake County).

Eligible projects typically include infrastructure improvements, fire protection, downtown revitalization, community centers, day care centers, senior centers, historic preservation, and infrastructure in support of housing. The project must meet one of the national objectives and be an eligible activity under the Community Development Block Grant program, and it must comply with applicable state and federal laws and regulations.

There is approximately $25,000,000 available each year through this program. The maximum award amount cannot exceed $500,000. A local match of at least 10% of the total project cost is required. In-kind contributions can be counted as local match up to 5% of the total project cost, with a maximum of $25,000.

There are two competitive funding rounds per year. Each round consists of the submittal of a proposal to the Indiana Department of Commerce, a site visit, and submittal of a final application. Please contact the Community Development Division for deadlines. An interested applicant should also meet with a Community Development field representative to discuss the project prior to submitting a proposal. At the time of application, a city or town cannot have more than one open Community Focus Fund (CFF) or Planning Grant, and a county cannot have more than two open CFFs and/or Planning Grants. Any open CFFs must be under construction by the time another CFF application is submitted.

The Community Focus Fund Planning Grant program is administered by the Indiana Department of Commerce and funded with federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) dollars. It is designed to assist in the funding of feasibility plans for future projects that either benefit low to moderate income persons or eliminate blight in communities. The goal is to identify needs/issues, explore options in addressing them, and determine the best course of action.

Eligible applicants include:

- Small cities which do not receive a CDBG entitlement directly from U.S. Housing and Urban Development;

- Incorporated towns;
- Counties (excluding Lake County).

Typical eligible planning activities include feasibility studies, preliminary engineering reports (PERs), project plans, redevelopment plans, environmental reviews and assessments, and site control, for issues such as infrastructure in support of affordable housing, land use, economic development, downtown revitalization, wetlands management, utilities, and historic preservation. Costs associated with data gathering, studies, analysis, preparation of plans, and the identification of actions to implement such plans are eligible for reimbursement.

The project must meet one of the national objectives and be an eligible activity under the CDBG program, and it must comply with applicable state and federal laws and regulations.

The total amount available each fiscal year is $2,000,000. The maximum award amount cannot exceed $50,000, and there is a required local match of 10% of the total project cost. In-kind contributions do not count toward the local match requirement. Typically, a water or sewer infrastructure study and preliminary engineering report can be completed for $35,000 or less.

Applications are accepted on a monthly basis, with a deadline of the last business day of each month. A letter of intent to submit a Planning Grant application must be sent to the Community Planning Specialist, in the Community Development Division at least one month prior to the application deadline. This will allow Community Development staff to conduct a site visit prior to completion of the application. The procurement process for obtaining professional services for the planning study must be completed prior to submitting an application, which may result in a 60-day period between letter of intent and submittal of the application.

At the time of application, a city or town cannot have more than one open Community Focus Fund (CFF) or Planning Grant, and a county cannot have more than two open CFFs and/or Planning Grants. Any open CFFs must be under construction by the time a Planning Grant application is submitted.

TAX CREDIT PROGRAMS

The DHPA also administers federal and state tax credit programs for historic preservation. Income tax credits are the principal governmental subsidy available for privately owned and funded historic preservation activities. Both the federal government and the state of Indiana offer a Rehabilitation Investment Tax Credit (RITC) equaling 20% of rehabilitation costs for qualified work at income-producing properties that are certified historic buildings. A net subsidy equaling 40% of qualified rehabilitation costs may be yielded by participation in both programs. Eligible properties include commercial buildings, factories, or even old houses – but they must be income producing, such as rental properties. Owner-occupied private residences are eligible only for the Indiana Residential Historic Rehabilitation Credit (RHRC).

For participation in the federal RITC program, a building must have been determined to be eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

In order to qualify for the RITC, all work must meet the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties. This distinguishes bona-fide historic preservation from more general remodeling projects. Applications for tax credit programs may be obtained from the DHPA. Applications for the federal RITC are also available on the Internet at: www2.cr.nps.gov/tps/tax/hpappl.htm.

OTHER TAX PROGRAMS

Please note that the two programs below are not administered by the DHPA, and consultation with a tax expert is strongly advised to explore various tax incentives.

Rehabilitation Tax Deduction

Indiana taxpayers who rehabilitate historic structures, commercial properties, as well as private homes, can qualify for a tax deduction if the work increases the assessed value of the building. Deductions are limited to the historic portion of existing buildings that are at least 50 years old and costing at least $10,000.

Low Income Housing Tax Credit

The federal Low Income Housing Tax Credit can be combined with the RITC to rehabilitate historic structures that will provide affordable housing. The federal government also provides certain tax incentives for the creation of rural housing. Contact the Indiana Housing Finance Authority for more information.

Best Practices

The Secretary of the Interior is responsible for establishing standards for all national preservation programs under Departmental authority and for advising federal agencies on the preservation of historic properties listed or eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places.

The Standards for Rehabilitation, a section of the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Historic Preservation, address the most prevalent preservation treatment of today: rehabilitation activities. Rehabilitation is defined as "the process of returning a property to a state of utility, through repair or alteration, which makes possible an efficient contemporary use while preserving those portions and features of the property which are significant to its historic, architectural, and cultural values."

The Standards that follow were originally published in 1977 and were revised in 1990 as part of Department of the Interior regulations (36 CFR Part 67, Historic Preservation Certifications). They pertain to historic buildings of all materials, sizes, construction types, and occupancy, and they encompass both the exterior and interior of historic buildings. The Standards also apply to related landscape features and the building's site and environment as well as attached, adjacent, or related new construction.

For more information, or to receive a copy of the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Historic Preservation Projects, contact the DHPA or write to: National Park Service, Heritage Preservation Services, 1849 C Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20240. You may also link to the website for the National Park Service's Heritage Preservation Services at www2.cr.nps.gov/tps.

Preservation Briefs are published by the National Park Service on a variety of topics in order to assist owners and developers of historic properties in recognizing and resolving common preservation and repair problems prior to initiating rehabilitation work. These technical documents are especially useful to preservation tax incentive program applicants and grant recipients because they explain recommended methods and approaches for rehabilitating historic buildings in a manner that is consistent with their historic character. Documents are available free of charge. For an up-to-date list go to the NPS Technical Preservation Services website at <www2.cr.nps.gov/tps>. To obtain copies of any of these briefs, order them online or request them from the DHPA.
